Seeking Aid, Detroit Considers Artificial Earthquake

DETROIT, MI — With the Michigan city facing the prospect of becoming a ghost town, city lawmakers hatched an enterprising plan to restore it to prosperity: Purposefully destroying it with a man-made, 7.5 “mega-quake.”

“We hope that the inevitable influx of aid and sympathy for our beleaguered city will be enough to restore it to its former glory,” said Mayor David Bing.

Detroit boasts a failing infrastructure as well as a Haiti-esque 15.4 percent unemployment rate. “The positives clearly outweigh the negatives right now,” asserted domestic policy analyst Audrey Cannon, who green-lighted the proposal.

“The benefits can come in so many wide-ranging areas. For example, more than 40,000 homes are vacant: If we start the quake there, we could get some free demolition out of the deal. The quake could even help our football team. If we can get other NFL teams to take pity on our feeble, pathetic Lions, they might decide to give us some good players for free. The list goes on and on.”

The actual methods of producing a gigantic tremor beneath Detroit initially stumped administrators, but they are now closing in on a plan. “We’re thinking of telling the Big Three automakers to build a giant, golden hammer to smack the ground with. It’s not like the automakers have anything better to do,” said Bing.

The Detroit skyline may have to turn to rubble if there is any chance of the city gaining real sympathy.

In addressing the concerns of his populace, Mayor Bing has assured everyone that he has carefully weighed the pros and cons of his maneuver. “We conservatively estimate the death toll to be around, say...50,000,” he noted solemnly. “But about that many people move out of Detroit every month regardless, so it’s a wash. We’re totally gonna go for it.” (Bill Driscoll)

News in Brief Brangelina to Adopt all Haitian Children

After donating one million dollars to Haiti relief efforts yesterday, Hollywood superstars Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie are reportedly set to adopt all the children in Haiti.

When asked if they were ready to take care of an additional two million children, Jolie—who already has six children—responded, “Well, we always wanted a baby from Haiti, but the government just wouldn’t give us one. I guess it was an all or nothing type of deal. I feel like we’re doing the right thing, though.” The couple’s nanny, Sally Richards, however, was not pleased. (Jeremy Lai)

The number of remaining months of delays before the opening of the Coupa Cafe. What does this mean for you? That this project will definitely not completed during your time at Stanford, and possibly may not even be finished by the time your children are applying here (this assumes you will have children in the next year and that they will be child geniuses applying to Stanford at age four). Many speculate that the reason for the extreme delays is that it takes a really long time to get the coffee from the CoHo all the way to right outside Green Library.
