After 30 Years, DNA Testing Frees Colonel Mustard

BILLIARD ROOM--Colonel Mustard will walk free today after being wrongly imprisoned for thirty years, thanks to new DNA evidence.

In 1979, Colonel Mustard was convicted of attacking Mrs. Peacock in the conservatory with a candlestick and was sentenced to life in prison by a jury of 3-6 of his peers aged from 6 to Adult.

Last week, new evidence came to light which revealed Professor Plum, a Stanford Resident Fellow, may have been involved in the incident.

"We wouldn't have thought to reopen the case if it weren't for the DNA testing in the Stanford Medical Labs," said Santa Clara County District Attorney Dolores Carr. "Our justice system is extremely flawed; sometimes it seems like people simply guess who they think committed the crime."

Miss Scarlet, a friend of both Colonel Mustard and Professor Plum, refused to comment on this latest development, saying only that she was in the cellar with Mr. Green at the time of the attack, and was at least six spaces away from the incident.

Colonel Mustard is overjoyed to be out of prison and is glad that the truth has come to light after all these years.

"I've been saying for thirty years that I was in the conservatory with the rope," said Mustard. "Finally someone believes me."

Stanford Unveils Rhetoric of FOX News

STANFORD, CA — In an apparent move to cut costs, the Stanford PWR program has combined several first-year courses for the Winter Quarter.

Administrators realized Monday that they could merge the Rhetoric of Deception, the Rhetoric of the Insult, and the Rhetoric of Outrage into a single course focusing on the FOX News channel.

Director of PWR Programming, Andrea Lunsford, stated that "FOX pundits such as Bill O'Reilly and Glenn Beck have a magical ability to deceive, insult, and outrage viewers. Students in this class will gain enormous insight into using these techniques to manipulate their audiences."

According to the class syllabus, "students will write essays that make provocative and inherently false arguments appear accurate and professional."

Conservative scholars at the Hoover Institute all vied for the prestigious teaching position, however News Corporation President Rupert Murdoch was ultimately given the honor of teaching the class.

Murdoch said that "Stanford is one of the most innovative campuses in the country, and students must understand that the newest trend in media is using biased coverage to both swing elections and profit from gullible audiences."

After hearing about this class, Condoleezza Rice asked the administration if she could teach a course titled "The Rhetoric of Interrogation."

Self-Esteem Sought by Passive Voice

GRAMMAR, PENN.—For years, the passive voice has been berated, insulted, and abused by English teachers across the country.

Though it has normally been viewed as a happy, self-confident grammatical structure capable of accepting the attacks, the passive voice has recently been seen crying itself to sleep and wishing it were stronger and more assertive. "I'm just not liked by anyone. In the 1600s, I was admired—it was the active voice who was despised. I was used by peasants, noblemen, and even Shakespeare! But now I am hated, ignored by even the present tense (the obnoxious jerk)."

Though psychological assistance has been provided, it is believed the passive voice's road to recovery will be long and difficult.
