Kelsei Wharton Elected First African American Vice President

A makeshift bonfire broke out in the Main Quad on Saturday night as Stanford students celebrated the election of Senator Kelsei Wharton as the first African-American vice president of Stanford University.

Red plastic cups were thrust high into the air as students celebrated the landslide victory of the man who entered the Stanford spotlight after being elected to the Senate just one year earlier.

Wharton's calls for change mobilized hundreds of thousands of college students and generated one of the highest turnouts of young voters in Stanford history.

"This is a historical moment," said Stephanie Morris '11. "I've been waiting for a black vice president for two hundred something years now. I can't begin to explain what this means for our university and our country."

A number of students from South Campus were concerned that Wharton might raise taxes in order to provide universal access to the Wellness Room. Some have even gone as far as calling him a socialist.

Despite resistance from the South, Wharton remains optimistic.

"If there is anyone out there who still doubts that America is a place where all things are possible, who still wonders if the dream of our founders is alive in our time, who still questions the power of our democracy, tonight is your answer," Wharton told tens of people at the CoHo.

Many students predict Wharton will also win the election next year because of the old saying "Once you go black, you never go back." (Kravitz)

Editorial: Candidates Glosed Over the Important Issues

The ASSU elections are over, and though dozens of candidates moved across campus spreading their ideas of a sustainable, tolerant and united Stanford, we think they missed many of the most important problems facing students today. We would like to take this opportunity to highlight some of these issues so that the new Senate can take action to solve our problems.

1) The Fire Truck House.

The confusion must stop! Students with dorm rooms on fire, homework on fire or who are on fire themselves will be attracted to the Fire Truck House because of its name. There, they will find a Women's Community Center unequipped to deal with their fire-related difficulties and an LGBT center that will encourage them to accept, rather than extinguish, their flaming lifestyle.

Women's Basketball Team Loss Looked Great on the iPad

STANFORD--Last week, the Stanford women's basketball team took on the UConn Huskies in a tough NCAA championship match.

Although the women's team came out with a loss, many die hard fans reported that it looked great on the iPad.

"It was hard watching Jayne Appel miss all those shots, but the quality of the video on the iPad was unbelievable," said basketball fanatic Roger Bueler.

The Cardinal went down on a 17-2 run, but those who watched it on the iPad reported that the animation for the score ticker on the bottom

'I hate to see us lose, but watching it on my iPad, I felt like I was right in the stadium with them' was absolutely unprecedented.

"I hate to see us lose," said a mother of one of the players, "but watching it on my iPad, I felt like I was right in the stadium with them!"

Other disappointed fans confirmed that although it was hard to watch the title slip away, the high speed wi-fi connection made for a great viewing experience.

The amount of money we approved as a student body for special fee requests for the upcoming 2010-2011 year. Now think about this: With that same 1.7 million dollars we could have bought probably 2 million Reese's Peanut Butter Cups (remember the discount for buying in bulk). And the best thing about 2 million Reese's Peanut Butter cups is that it's actually 4 million Reese's Peanut Butter cups because they come in packages of two!
